The Jarbidge agenda

What will protesters do – and how will federal officials respond?

JARBIDGE, Nev. – When several thousand protesters from Nevada, Idaho – and beyond – head to the washed-out South Canyon Road next weekend, they could be working in defiance of federal government warnings when they try to open the 900-foot stretch of wilderness road. The showdown could boil down to two key questions.

About 3,000 to 4,000 people are expected to show up next week in Jarbidge.

"We're getting people from as far away as Rhode Island and Florida who are coming to the event," said Marian McKenzie, a Shovel Brigade volunteer from Elko, Ne.

The goal is not necessarily to open the road back up - that is nearly impossible, 'especially with hand tools, and without buildozers.

JARBIDGE, Nev. – Last week, two College of Southern Idaho students walked past the washed-out end of the South Canyon Road, about three miles past the point where dirt and rocks block motorized traffic.

They almost didn't come, because they didn't want to get embroiled in the controversy over South Canyon Road. But they came anyway for a look at the land beyond the road closure. The Jarbidge Canyon they encountered Wednesday was Local efforts to rebuild the road erupted into controversy when repairs ran hard up against the listing of the bull trout in the Jarbidge River as threatened. Scientists say rebuilding the road would harm the fish.

Officials agreed after six months of study that the road could not be rebuilt without causing significant environmental damage. Forest Service officials have agreed to build a trail that could accommodate limited motorized traffic, such as all-terrain vehicles, and provide access to the Jarbidge Wilderness.

Eyes fix on two justices

Supreme Court moderates could cast decisive votes

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – This week, Supreme Court Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony M. Kennedy, the moderate conservatives appointed by President Reagan, will say what they think about Miranda warnings, "partial-birth" abortions and public aid to parochial schools. Their opinions almost surely will determine how the Supreme Court rules on these issues. The justices are expected to wrap their term next week by handing down rulings in eight remaining cases.

Greens nominate Nader for president

Canadian Cities Calgary Montreal Toronto Vancouver

DENVER - Consumer advo-cate Ralph Nader won the Green Party's presidential nomination Sunday, and he and his support-ers vowed to challenge what they decry as the corrupting influence of giant corporations in American life and politics. Nader promised to take every opportunity to cajole, nag and insist that the Democrats and Republicans allow the Green and Reform Party candidates to par-ticipate in the national debates this fall. Finding support for that could ticipate in the nauonial acosac-his fall.

Finding support for that could be a daunting task, Nader and his supporters acknowledge. The Green Party is in its infancy in the United States – with only a relative handful of elected local officials, little money and even less experience on the national stage.

How little money? Nader has raised about $1 million and thinks he can gather about $5 million. But at the Green convention here, Nader's California campaign director, Ross Middle and California campaign director, Ross Middle and California campaign and California cale and California cale and California cale and California cale pooled their cash and came up with $130. The California delegation, which represents about 100,000 registered Green voters, stuffed $665 in the recycled boxes that were passed from hand to hand in the convention hall like a church offering.

Regardless of how much church offering.

Regardless of how much money he raises, Nader expects to be on the ballot in at least 40s money he raises, Nader expects to be on the ballot in at least 40s where his nartiestabilishment message might have traction.

"If Albert Gore does not change the spectrum of his agenda," Nader said, "he is going to lose California," And the thinking goes, if Gore stumbles in California, his candidacy is introuble.

So many RVs came – paying $75 for parking without even blinking, Garrett said – that the RV lot was overflowing.

Last year $5.500 people came to the Regatta, which was down from between $6,000 to $6,200 spectuors in 1298.

Davidian lawyers file challenge

WACO, Texas (AP) -Lawyers in the Branch Davidian wrongful-death case have filed a detailed challenge to a British firm's report dis-missing their claims of govern-ment gunfire at the end of the 1993 sieze ment gunfire at the end of the 1993 siege.

The pleading, filed Friday afternoon by lead plaintiffs' lawyer Michael Caddell, is aimed at persuading U.S. District Judge Walter S. Smith to reconsider his recent threat to throw out the issue. The pleading argues that further investigation and a full-courtroom airing are needed because the report by courtappointed Vector Data Systems is too flawed to resolve whether government gunfire caused repeated flashes on a 1993 FBI infrared recording. It includes a report from a retired CIA imagery analyst disputing Vector's conclusion that flashes on the FBI video weren't gunfire because no gummen were visible where flashes were recorded and no people were visible until after had enguled much of the Branch Davidians' building.

Democratic convention's financial outlook brightens after scramble

LOS ANGELES - The financial LOS ANGELES – The financial fortunes of this summer's Democratic National Convention, which just a week ago were in doubt, have suddenly reversed, thanks to an aggressive scramble for public and private money capped Saturday by a fund-raiser featuring President Clinton Mayor Richard Riordan's home in Mayor Richard Riordan's home in ood on the west side of Los

All told, that means the convention raised $7 million in 24 hours.

All told, that means the convenion raised 57 million in 44 hours.

As a result, according to convention officials and others, virtually all of the money for the Los Angeles event, which just a week ago was in peril, now is either in the bank or on the way. The convention itself is budgeted at $35.3 million and planners expect to spend $2 million more on community events and other related activities.

"We're very, very close," host committee president Noelia Rodrigues said Saurday after the event with Clinton. "We're within reach of the finish line."

Much of the credit for that effort, convention officials and others say, goes to Terry McAuliffe, the newly appointed thairman of the Democrate National Convention Committee and a close friend of the president of t

Obviously, something is dreadfully wrong with a system that sees such a dramatic rise in children's deaths. Idaho's rate of child deaths in accidents and child suicides also is higher than the national average.

The state's high school dropout rate also notched up a point to 10 percent, dropping Idaho to 29th in that category from 22nd and reversing three years of declines in the number of teens quitting high school.

On a positive note, the survey showed a decline in infant mortality and deaths of teens 15 to 19. The states teen birth rate also improved to 23 per 1,000 females from 26. Teens 16 to 19 who neither work nor go to school held steady at 9 percent, but Idaho dropped to 26th from 22nd because other states improved in that category.

t says here that Hillary Clinton is taking off the gloves in her U.S. Senate race against Rick Lazio. The New York Times reports that Clinton has adopted a "new, aggressive approach" designed to brand Lazio as a right-wing extremist whose votes in Congress have hurt women, children and families. Come to think of it, this isn't a new strategy. When Lazio came off the bench recently to replace New York City Mayor Rudy Giuliani as Clinton's opponent, the Clinton campaign's immediate reaction was to attack the Republican congress new Company of the Company of Newt Gingrich.

That was the ideological equivalent of declaring war, of course, and Lazio fired back by raising the carpetbagger issue against Clinton, a barely unpacked New York transplant whose motives are highly suspect in the eyes of some Empire State residents.

York transplant whose mouves are major suspect in the eyes of some Empire State residents.

After that initial exchange of rhetorical warheads, both candidates seemed to back off and begin focusing on their own ideas. But now, says the Times, Clinton has launched a nuclear attack by delivering a campaign speech in which she blasted Lazio on gun control, abortion rights and education policy.

The newspaper quoted the speech:

"On issue after issue, my opponent has on a follower, now leader. He word for a trillion-dollar budget that would have slashed so many services that we need here in New York. He would squander the surplus and, I believe, endanger the

Before Guillani dropped out of the race to deal with cancer and other personal problems, Clinton's campaign strategy was cut-and-dried: Attack, attack, attack.

With Giuliani embroiled in controversy more or less constantly in connection with his responsibilities as mayor, he was an inviting target for criticism. He virtually had a bull's-eye tattooed on his forehead.

To make matters worse, the mayor often hurt his own cause by being defensive, insensitive and just plain jerky.

Lazio couldn't be more different. His early campaign appearances were amiable, charming and relentlessly upbeat—which might be why Clinton put away

Time for Richardson to go

"zero tolerance" for any more security lapses at the nation's nuclear laboratories.

That was the right attitude. Sadly, Richardson failed to deliver.

On Wednesday, he still insisted before a Senate panel that he had done everything possible to ensure tighter security at the labs. But someone must take responsibility for the recent disappearance – and strange reappearance – of two computer hard drives holding nuclear secrets at the department's Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico.

Richardson asserted that the FBI so far has found no evidence of espionage. But the point is that there could have been, and it was Richardson's duty as secretary of energy to see that hat possibility did not exist.

For a year Richardson has stalled and stymied an effort by the Republican-controlled Congress, and supported by President Clinton, to transfer responsibility for nuclear weapons security from his office to a new, semiautonomous agency: the National Nuclear Security

Then came the discovery that two hard drives had gone missing and that the disappearance had not been reported for 24 days. Last Friday, after the FBI and the Energy Department had launched an investigation and had twice searched the X Division where the drives went missing, the drives turned up behind a photocopy machine, in an area that had been thomughly searched twice.

Richardson has suggested that the lost-and-found hard drives might have been taken by an employee who later panicked when the probe was launched and put them back under suspicious circumstances.

That may well be, but the damage is done. This happened on Richardson's watch. A chorus of Republican congressional leaders is now calling for his resignation.

It's time for him to truly take full responsibility for this security dehade

Paper is blind – or blased

So The Times News editorial staff doesn't think Twin Falls County needs a confined animal feeding operation morn-torium. They have confidence in the existing permitting process now that state Legislation has strengthened a county's jurisdiction to make sting decisions.

The June 20 editorial was very astruct to notice that the faces of those requesting the moratorium are changing, as well the rise. Why is it so hard to recognize the serious problems neighborhoods encounter from CAFOS? Are you really not capable of grasping why such requests are being made? I can only conclude that the paper is either blind or biased, any bots on which it is?

The been asking for a moratorium since 1995. How many poorly designed operations have been built in that time frame? I can think of a few. Two recently made the pages of your paper in the Cedar Draw area with neighborhood complaints. One is under construction, the other brand new and there are already apparent problems, yet both have been permitted by the county. One of these operators has a history of neighborhood complaints from a previous operation. Does this instill confidence in the existing process?

You continue to label those who dan't want these industrial operations for neithese industrial operations for neithese industrial operations for neithese products these problems surrounding CAFOs for what they really are? Rock Creek is no longer safe for children to play in, groundwater nitrate levels are on the rise throughout the county, and what about that mess by the Hollister School? Will that be resolved before school starts in the fail? While legislation's been passed to strengthen county authority and an advisory panel will be developed to assist country panel will are more than willing to assist operators with their permitting needs, "just business as usual," as they say.

So what's really changed? The problems have grown with the expansions and new operations. Public awareness has grown, but not much else has changed. The country hasn't taken a changed. The country hasn't taken and the same and the same and the same part of the same problems with the anticipated growth of this industry. That's why we want a moratorium, and statewide would be even better!

HAILEY - Blaine County has a new tool to help plan subdivisions, gauge avalanche potential and carry out a hundred other tasks.

It's called a geographical interface system - which uses digital data to produce maps.

The technology should speed up time-consuming paperwork to buy and sell property. And it should give sheriff's deputies a clearer picture of crime hotspots.

Using this technology, planners can overlay a regular map with variety of data - such as, say, the wintering grounds as which wintering grounds as which as preading out 20 maps on a table, officials will be able to gather

Group hikes 200 miles to raise money for Romanian orphanages

MOREY FALLS (AP) - They battled blisters, braved the blazing sun and even ran into a couple of snakes, but nothing deterred a handful of young people who set out to walk the 200 miles from Salmon.

They did it to help kids their age, orphans in Romania.

The walkers, who ranged in age from 11 to the 72-year-old group leader, the Rev. Erick Kaiser, arrived on the greenbelt in Idaho Falls Saturday morning alter two weeks on the road.

Thomson, originally fam Meridian and who now lives in California, came up with the concept. She visited Romania and saw thousands of children who had been abandoned by families too poor to support them. The children live in the sewers because it is warm, and beg and steal to stay alive. Many of them are addicted to sniffing glue, which staves off hunger pains.

Tim Mielke, 16, of Firth, heard about the walk when Kaiser spoke at the Assembly of God First Tabernade Church. "I thought, 'Poor kids.' The older kids steal the younger kids' clothes and they all run around in the sewers," said Mielke, who raised $600 on the walk.

IDAHO FALLS (AP) - The body of Driggs resident William T. Danford, 45, was recovered from the Teton River one week after he drowned while kayaking. The recovery of Danford's body on Saturday brought closure to family members and friends. "They found him and I got to see him," said Danford's girl-friend, Laurel Dana. "I'm really happy that we have him and can have some closure."

The bill includes $35 million for the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial Challenge Cost-Share Program. Idaho communities can apply for grants from the program for Lewis and Clark-leated projects in their area.

The bill allocates more than $1 million for scenic easement purchases in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area and other land acquisitions. Another $575,000 will go to the Bureau of Land Management for managing noxious weeds.

Further, the bill gives the state $100,000 for the Citizens Management Committee to develop scientific peer review on grizzly bear reintroduction. Gordon: 'I knew I was faster'

SONOMA, Calif. (AP) – Jeff Gordon needed this. The three-time Winston Cup champion extended fils road course winning streak to six consections roces on Sunday when helbecistely won the Save Mart Kragen 350 on the twists and tuns of Sears Point Raceway. Gordon, who is working with a new crew chief, has had an uneven season with only one other win, at Talladega. Going into the race, he acknowledged the toad course was important. Rhein wins lackluster World Bowl OB battle

SPORTS IN BRIEF -

Rhein Wins lackluster World Bowl QB battle FRANKFURT, Germany – The Rhein Fire, despite trailing most of the game, won their second World Bowl title in three years with a last gasp scoring drive.

Pepe Pearson's 1-yard touchdown with 1:12 left gave the Fire a 13-10 win over the Scottish Claymores. But the victory was not assured until Claymores kicker Roper Hart's 40-yard field-goal attempt went wide left with 4 seconds left.

The game featured the league's two best passers in Kevin Daft and Danny Wuerffel, but neither one looked sharp. Daft, who led NFL Europe with a league-record 107.3 quarterback rating, was 15-61-29 for 177 yards and an interception for the Claymores (6-5). Wuerffel, he 1996 Heisman Trophy winner who finished with a 107.2 quarterback rating, was 15-61-30 for only 90 yards with two interceptions, but led the Fire (8-3) on a 43-yard touchdown drive for the winning score.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

Patience and diligence, like untains." — William Penn

One of the first ploys taught to budding declarers is the holdup play. A declarer delays winning a trick to isolate a defender's threatening suit. Though less frequently, the holdup play is also available to a defender. In today's example, West refuses to win his diamond ace so that his partner can jettison a blocking honor.

West leads a spade, and dummy's queen loses to East's king. East returns his jack to dummy's ace, and South leads diamonds. Since he cannot develop enough tricks without dummy's diamonds, South must hope that spades are 44 or that the spade suit blocks.

If West impatiently wins his di-spades are 4-6 or that the spade suit blocks.

If West impatiently wins his diamond ace to clear the spades, he will establish his spade suit, but he will never cash it. South will lose only two spades and a diamond to post an overtrick.

However, if West once more refuses to take his diamond ace, what can South do? With no other way to win nine tricks, South will lead a third diamond, hoping for the best. On the third diamond, least unloads his blocking spade 10, allowing West to cash his spade winners after he wins his diamond ace.

Can West lose by holding up diamond ace.

Can West lose by holding up his diamond ace? No, he cannot. South's one no-trump denics a heart suit. And with West's formidable club holding, it is impossible for South to score nine winners.

that got away

A fundamental belief held by deferious is that if you are on cland, you cannot be killed by a fish. This belief has been reinforced by the Steven Spielberg movies "Jaws," "Jaws II," and "Saving Brivate Ryan from Jaws," in which the only characters to die were the mose stupid enough to venture into the Adantic Ocean, where even ankle-deep water often conceals predators the size of Winnebagos.

So most Americans remain on producting they hade underly the producting they hade. Unformation of "Daylight Saving Time" - is false.

At this point you're saying:
You will not like my answer one bit in his post in the government doing about it?"
You will not like my answer one bit. I have here an article from the front page of the March 9, 2000, issue of the Wisconsin State Journal, winten by Dee J. Hall and sent in by many alert readers. The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources to "improve the habitat" in a marsh by poisoning a large number of carp.

Cleanser can be sunscreen as well, but read label

DEAR PAULA: I saw this product in an ad at the back of a fitness magazine and decided to check out its Web site. The product is called SoapScreen. It's supposed to be a shower gel and sunscreen in one, which would supposedly make it more likely for people to actually use sunscreen all your at all times. That would be a good idea if it works. I guess - a way to protect you and your family's skin without any extra effort - but I don't see how this product could possibly work. If it cleans well, it wouldn't cleave enough residue to protect from sun damage, and if it left enough sunscreen, it wouldn't cleave checking, and I'm the Web Web and UVB protect from but the ingredient lite theyent doesn't include avobenous, zinc oxide, or titanium dioxide, Screen's claim of being an SPF 12 in cleanser form.

SoapScreen works by depositing more than an SPF 30 or your skin, with the net result being that after showering and rinsing, you end up with an SPF 12.

That's not bad, but you don't need sunscreen from head to too, at least not every day, and why deposit active sunscreen ingredients where your body won't be expected to least any SoapScreen should only be used for those who are wearing less clothing and exposing more skin? That sounds contradictory, Either this product is or isn't an SPF 12. An SPF 12 is supposed to indicate that, if you turn pink after being in the sun unprotected for 20 minutes, then with an SPF 12 you should be able to stay outside for four hours before turning pink (12 x 20 minutes 4 hours).

St. John's trouble

St. John's trouble

St. John's wort, the popular herbal treatment for depression, may cause unexpected side effects if taken with other drugs, a new study suggests. The component in the herb that combats depression also activates a liver enzyme that processes medications from the North Carcolina pharmaceutical corippany Glaxo Wellcome. The scientists studied extracts from three commercially available preparations of St. John's wort. They also studied hyperforin, the chemical in the herb thought to relieve depression. Human liver cells grown in the lab exposed to these substances produced an enzyme known to be crucial for most drugs to work properly. The researchers didn't study St. John's wort in people, but warned that excess levels of the liver enzyme could interfere with other medications.

Sweating the wet stuff: Perspiration is healthy

Genlus, Thomas Alva Edison said, is 99 percent perspiration and 1 percent inspiration. Genlus or no, who wants to go around looking (and feeling) like wet rag? Perspiration - let's be real here and just call it sweat — may be the obvious byproduct of physical exertion and warm conditions, but it's something most people rry to avoid. Sweat, especially in the white-collar work-place, is the enemy, the object of storm and ridicule. "Never let them see you sweat" is the mantra of the entertrainment industry, Wall Street and Madison Avenue. Lawyers, educators and health professionals also assiduosty try to avoid the beat of brow and obvious pirations.

From head to foot we spray and powder ourselves to keep moisture and odors at bay. We're an air conditioning-dependent society with a cultural aversion to sweat. But while sweat may be uncomfortable, it's essential.

"It's a normal body function. An absolutely necessary body and a step of the state of the healthy person during exercise. Is heat stroke."

While sweating may be socially lolented (it is summer, after all), perspiration odor is not. Bacteria armitis groin, feet – give off foul doors. So, too, does poor hygiene. How to treat it? The easiest way is to use soap and water. Deodorant and antibacterial soaps combat the return of body-odor-causing bacteria. Clean clothing, specifically natural fabrics such as cotton that absorb perspiration, will help in the odor-flighting cause. Of course, deodorant and antiperspirants will help. Foot odor caused by sweating can be reduced by dusting the feet with cornstarch before putting on socks (again, cotton is better than nylon or syndys). thetics).

Sweat, you see, is all around us.
This is the season it shines. "It's almost unavoidable," Steinberg said.

You don't need to be a genius to know that much is true.

The practice, which produces bright colors not generally available for contact lenses, can be dangerous, association officials warn. Some people could have serious allergic reactions to the coloring, and since dye is not sterille, the tinting could lead to eye infections. The deep colors of the lenses may also impair vision.

Janice Knepley, a registered nurse who works for the school system in Napoleon, Ohio, said she has counseled students who came in with bright red, royal blue, orange and yellow contacts, sometimes even having a different color in each eye. So far, no students have reported any serious problems from the practice, she said.

You can leave more to, some children than others and cast off any debts your children owe you against the inheritance you choose to leave them.
Will disputes among surviving family members are statistically rare. They usually arise when one family member receives a disproportionately greater inheritance and there is some reason to believe that the favored beneficiary exerted under influence over the will maker.

A will provision threatening complete disinheritance to anyone contesting the will is only effective if there is no basis in fact or law for the disgruntled challenger to make an objection.

Parenting is a difficult challenge for teenagers

DEAR ABBY: My letter concerns the one from "Steve in Minnesota," who wrote about teen-age pregnancy. I understand why he says people don't realize how difficult parenthood is until they find out the hard way. Once it happens, their lives are changed forever. However, these points should be made to young people before they decide to have children. What does it say to those who are already parents?

say to those who are already parents?

I am a 17-year-old mother of a beautiful 8-month-old daughter. Teen-age mothers are often perceived as young girls who have ruined our lives. However, we haven't ruined our lives—we haven't ruined our lives—we haven't rouined our lives—we haven't complicated.

I earned up high school diploma and work at a great job in an office where I make far more than minimum wage. I will soon start college to pursue my dream of becoming a registered nurse.

I played with fire and have to deal with the consequences. Having kids is a responsibility not to be taken lightly, but it's

DEAR OPTIMISTIC: I commend you for your maturity, Children should be considered a blessing - nor a punishment for sexual irresponsibility.

Many counties in the United States have family social service agencies that offer classes in parenting skills to teen-age parents, maternal and child healthcare clinics, job training, and individual and family counseling. However, not all very young parents are up to the task of meeting the challenges you have

- GROWN-UP MOM IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR MOM: I hope that teens who read your letter will heed its cautionary message? Although the United States has, the highest teen pregnancy rate; in the Westerni world, contrary to popular belief, American, teens did NOT invent sex. I hays, read that teens in Europe are more sexually active. However, because Europeans are far more open about discussing sex within families, their teen-agers behave more like adults than those in the United States. When European teens reach lo or IZ, they are expected to behave, responsibly about sexual matters, and visit family planning clinics, and visit family planning clinics traceptives as needed Perhaps, we should take a page out of their book.

Get priorities in order. Let it be known: You can handle it.

Sharon Stone signs contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Sharon Stone has changed her mind and signed for a reported $15 million to reprise the defining role of her career.

Stone has said for many years she would not take part in a sequel to "Basic Instinct," the 1992 thriller in which she teamed with Michael Douglas. Douglas played a policeman who becomes sexually involved with Stone's murder success.

Douglas is not returning for the sequel, leading to speculation that his character may have been killed off by Stone after the conclusion of the first movie, which ended with them making love while an ice

Daily Variety reported Friday that "Basic Instinct 2" will be financed and produced by Mario to by "Desperancy Specking Susan" screenwriters Leora Barish and Henry Bean, is to be filmed this fall for release in late 2001 or early 2002.
